

Elul Day 11:

What will you plant?

We learn the legacy of the old man from this story in the Babylonian Talmud (Taanit 23a):

One day Honi was journeying on the road and he saw a man planting a carob tree. He asked, "How long does it take [for this tree] to bear fruit?"

The man replied: "Seventy years."

Honi then further asked him:

"Are you certain that you will live another seventy years?"

The man replied: "I found [already grown] carob trees in the world; as my forefathers planted those for me, so I too plant these for my children."

What is your legacy? What gift do you want to leave to the world?

Please submit your Elul Story.

This opportunity to connect with each other and learn from one another as we prepare for the High Holidays, only works, if you participate.

Todah Rabba - Thanks,

Rabbi Susie Moskowitz

<mailto:ravsusie@gmail.com>